

Lee L. Woodard Sons take a sculptural approach for their new woven wire and wrought iron collection. Armchair, easy chair, and side chair come with straight legs, as shown, or with curvaceous bases, in dining or lounge heights. Slip-on covers of cotton carpeting are optional. Called Sculptura, the group includes side chair, below, to retail at $25; armchair, above right, $42 with cover as shown; stacking chair, above, $26; and capacious easy chair, right, $34. Glass or slate-topped dining tables round out the series which comes in black, white, pink, blue, mocha, or yellow finishes.

Cockfight chair, above, sets a slim-waisted seat on wrought iron base, at $57.50.

John B. Salterini Company, Inc. uses wicker as the common denominator for new dining chairs designed by Maurizio Tempestini. It is wrapped around wrought iron for open back chair, right, which retails at about $62.50 with foam rubber cushion. Round pine member is wrapped with wicker for curved back model, above, to retail at $57.50 with cushion. Triangle of wrought iron which forms the back is continuous with the back legs.
